Nicholas Store Again Burglarized Early Monday

Thieves Batter Way in Through Coal Chute—Heavy Loss in Many Articles of Winter Clothing—No Clue to Robbers.

"What price protection?" was the thought that flitted through Charlie Nicholas' mind as he entered his dry goods store at 7 a.m. on Tuesday morning to find goods strewn about the floor, the back door wide open and leather jackets, suits, socks, shoes, suit cases and other articles stolen by burglars who had battered their way through the coal chute with a battering ram and gaining entrance to the upper floor had made a killing to the tune of anywhere from $750 to $1,000 worth of goods.

For several years this store has been robbed on an average of once a year, and only once has any of the loot been recovered, when a small quantity was found cached in the nearby hills. The windows and doors have been barred, the coal chute barred as well, but all to no avail. Even with a light burning in the store burglars apparently worked undisturbed. Charlie left the store at closing time on Monday evening, towards 5.30. Constable Wm. Antle stated he was on the street at 3.30 a.m. but there was no indication then of a break-in. Street lights being turned off about 2 a.m., as is the usual rule, leaves the town in stygian darkness, especially when there isn't any moon to faintly illuminate the place. Usually the policeman has an intelligent policeman accompanying him, who can be relied on to give the alarm if suspicious characters are around. This would indicate that the robbery took place between 3.30 a.m. and 6.30 a.m. With a speeding truck or automobile, thieves would be well away before the burglary was discovered.

Nicholas' store has suffered more than any other in town from burglaries, despite all possible precautions against forcible entry, and Charlie with indignation mixed with sadness remarked that it is hard enough to earn a living without being robbed every so often.

It would appear that the af-

Blairmore's War Memorial

This beautiful memorial to Blairmore's war dead, erected by the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire, Blairmore Chapter, was unveiled with fitting ceremony last Friday, Remembrance Day, in the presence of Legionnaires, and other organizations. It is located on the court house grounds, in a fine setting, with flowers and foliage surrounding it in the summer, and the dark background of snow-clad pines in the winter.

The design was by A. J. Hart, of Calgary, who also was the sculptor. The monument is of gray granite, and the inscription thereon is as follows:

"In honor of the Men of Blairmore who died for their Country in the Great War."
"They have passed on, leaving the Heritage of a Glorious Memory."

The Churches

ST. ALBAN'S CHURCH

Rev. J. R. Hague, Incumbent.

2.30 p.m., Sunday school.

11 a.m., Matins and sermon.

Read Psalm 73:22-26.

Every minute of the day we are called upon to make decisions. Much of our time is spent in trying to choose between this way or that. And great unhappiness falls upon us when we fail to decide rightly. The church helps us to make the right decisions by bringing God's advice to us. How does it do it? By telling us to speak to Him of our perplexities and then to wait in silence for His answers.

That response may come as we hear His word read, or as we are joined with others in praise and recollection, or as we carry the uplift of these moments out into the world of action.

Bring your hard problems to God in His church. Bring them to Christ's minister in confidence. Bring them to the altar at the feast of love. How can God counsel if you do not seek His help? Christ gave us the church as a means of conveying His thoughts to our troubled minds. Let the church help you think right.

You are cordially welcome at St. Alban's church. Your fellowship and co-operation are earnestly desired.

fair was deliberately planned. With a careful watch kept on the movements of the night policeman, it is easy to time the robbery so that the thieves could work undisturbed, and it is possible that the same men who have taken part in previous robberies of a similar nature were on the job again.

Boy Scout and Girl Guide Notes

ATTENTION, SCOUTS!

Our last meeting was well attended, considering the cold weather. Thirteen were present, and three newcomers. We are urged to bring all boys between the ages of 12 and 18 years who are interested in Scout work. Meetings are held every Tuesday night at 7 o'clock.

We are proud to say that two of our boys won the milk bottle contest sponsored by Meadow Sweet Dairies Limited. The lucky boys were Vance Hulbert and Jack Jones.

Several comments have been made about the Union Jack being flown upside down while being carried in the Armistice Day parade. A mistake on our part.

A change has been made in the troop order. The Second Coleman Troop, formerly known as the Catholic troop, has been changed to the First Coleman Troop, and is sponsored by the Elks lodge. The scoutmaster is N. Nicholas and Fred Weil is assistant scoutmaster.

For the next meeting, Scouts, don't forget your First Aid bandages and dues—"Billy" Milley, news correspondent for Coleman Scouts.

Mining Institute Officers Address Local Branch

Famous Sudbury Nickel Mines Development Pictured in Lantern Slides by President Collins

Rocky Mountain branch of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy met on Wednesday evening in the Greenhill hotel, when the members were addressed by Mr. E. A. Collins, president of the C.I.M.M., who is assistant to the general manager of the International Nickel Co., owners of the famous mines at Sudbury, Ont. He showed interesting lantern slides depicting the romantic development in fifty years of what is considered the richest piece of property in the world, as well as photographs of the early prospectors and explorers who discovered the famous nickel bearing ore in the Sudbury region.

Further details will be given next week. J. J. McIntyre presided at the meeting, which was attended by fifteen members. A banquet prior to the meeting was served in the Greenhill hotel, presided over by Mr. George Kellogg. An address was given by Lt. Col. Cole on a recent visit to mining properties in Arizona and Utah. Mr. J. R. Smith, of West Canadian Collieries, Ltd., an indefatigable advocate for wider markets, is secretary of the branch.

Attendance from Coleman were G. Kellogg, J. J. McIntyre, A. F. Short and H. T. Halliwell, representing the Board of Trade; from Blairmore—J. A. Brisset, L. P. Robert, J. R. Smith, T. A. Mrs. Mary Bell Died in Toronto

Mrs. Mary Bell, mother of John Bell, of Coleman, and the late William Bell, died on Tuesday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Erickson, in Toronto, aged 81 years. She was born in Perthshire, and came to Canada in 1919 with her son John, who had visited the old home that year. She lived in Coleman till 1928, when she went east to live with her daughter. Another daughter in Toronto is Mrs. C. Ross. Mrs. Bell's husband died in 1903 in Scotland and another daughter, Mrs. Dan McLelland, well-known in Coleman, died here in 1935.

The death of her son William, late manager of the Grand Union hotel here, it is feared hastened her death, though she had been in feeble health for some time.

Don't Overcook Fish!

Our Canadian Fish Have the Finest Flavor, Says Government Expert.

Miss Hazel J. Freeman, Dominion government cookery expert, says: "The clear, cold waters of our northern lakes and rivers, the salty tang of our two great oceans make Canadian fish exceptionally fine in flavor."

"The secret in cooking fish," says Miss Freeman, "lies in having the heat—whether electric, gas, kerosene or coal stove—not enough to broil or bake them quickly, and above all not too long. Of course, the timing is up to the cook, and it is this very timing that marks the difference between having fish that is cooked to perfection, or stewed until it has lost its heart and soul, and that indescribable something that makes the family welcome fish with gusto. So keep an eye on the fish, when the flesh is firm and tender, when the connective tissue holding the fibres together is gelatinous, that's the time to stop. Fish should be cooked until the albuminous substance is 'set' and no more. This is the protein constituent of the fish, and when it takes on a cream color, the albumen is set and the fish is done. Each flake of the fish may be pulled apart in loose folds, full of its own flavorful juices. For fillets one inch or less in thickness, it takes 10 minutes in a hot oven (500 F.), whether the fish weighs one pound or five."

Remembrance Day Service in Miners Hall

Rev. H. J. Bevan and Captain Fred Hewitt Assist in Service—Sidney C. Short Delivered Address.

Remembrance Day was observed by a service in the miners hall under the direction of the Canadian Legion, with Bert Garrett, president of the branch, as chairman. Taking part were Rev. H. J. Bevan, of St. Paul's church, and Captain Fred J. Hewitt, of the Salvation Army. The address was given by Sidney C. Short, and the singing was led by the choir of St. Paul's church under the direction of Dr. C. Rose.

Mr. Short contrasted the attitude of world opinion to-day with that of Armistice Day of 1918, when there was so much talk of the war having been fought to save democracy, and to make the world safe from another war. The question was often asked, did the men who fought and died, die in vain? Considering the conflict of world opinions and ideals to-day, some might think they had, but it could also be truly said that they did not die vainly. The freedom for which the Allies fought seems to have been forgotten in some countries. He believed that only by the efforts of Neville Chamberlain, prime minister of Great Britain, were we saved from being in the midst of another great war on this Remembrance Day.

In keeping with the spirit of the occasion, a solo was sung by Dr. Rose, and the selection by the choir, "Sleep, Comrades, Sleep," was very fine. "The Last Post" and "Reveille" was sounded by Comrade James Lowe. The honor roll was read by A. McCulloch.

In the parade from the town hall to the place of service there marched ex-service men, Guides and Boy Scouts, headed by the town band. Several selections were played by the band following the service. Following a stormy day on Thursday, the weather on Friday was fine, and the hall was comfortably filled by those desiring to pay their tribute to the Empire's dead.

The Ladies Auxiliary, which has proved a very valuable organization in Legion activities, celebrated the day by serving a banquet in the Oddfellows hall in the evening. The address was given by C. F. Founds, on Remembrance Day. Community singing helped to round out the evening's program.

Tom Badham Writes

In the mail this morning came a letter from Tom Badham, well known here, now living in Calgary, enclosing two dollars in payment of a renewal subscription to The Journal, to which he has subscribed for 18 years. In a footnote to his letter he writes: "I hope your hockey team will do better this year than last year, or else I am not pulling any more for them." Evidently Tom is looking for the team to get into the play-offs this year.

Mrs. Betton of High River, for ten years in charge of the Cubs there, as part of the Boy Scout movement, addressed a meeting in the school auditorium on Wednesday evening, which proved of valuable interest to those attending. In the afternoon she addressed the Cubs, who are in charge of Mrs. Frank H. Graham and Mrs. B. Steeves. While here, Mrs. Betton was the guest of Mrs. Steeves.

Agricultural Salvation

A few years ago a good deal was printed and heard in this country about the Danish co-operative movement and the system of rural education as practised in that little European country, the close tie which exists between Danish rural education and co-operation and the profound effect which this combination has exerted upon the economic and cultural life of the people of Denmark and particularly of the residents of the agricultural areas.

So much interest was evinced in the results of the tie-up between education and co-operation in Denmark that governmental authorities in this country a few years ago secured a great deal of data on the subject and this information was widely disseminated throughout the prairie provinces. In the course of a year or two farmers and others in this country became well posted on what has been and is being done in Denmark and the results on the welfare of the people of that country.

Generally speaking the information secured by the people of this country was favorably received by the farming community of Western Canada and while it was generally recognized the Danish systems of rural education and co-operative marketing of agricultural products could not be adopted in this country in toto, there were many who felt that some of the features of both could be made adaptable here, not only to the economic benefit of the agriculturist but also to the promotion of a better cultural life.

During the era of the great depression of the past eight or nine years the interest which had been aroused in this country in the two movements which have contributed so much to the material welfare and happiness of the Danish rural people appears to have dropped out of sight and that is to be regretted for there is much of value therein of which advantage might be taken in shaping the future course of the rural life of these prairies.

Undoubtedly this loss of interest can properly be attributed to the struggle which the farmers have had to wage during the past few years for their very existence. Agriculturists have had to wage warfare against a series of disasters of great magnitude, including drought, dust, rust and grasshoppers, forcing them to give undivided attention to intimate threats and problems and leaving them little opportunity or energy to prosecute researches further afield.

Should Consider Possibilities

With, it is to be hoped, a return to more nearly normal yields in 1930, the present might be an appropriate time to take stock of present day trends in Western Canadian agricultural industry in the hope of determining the course which should be shaped to ensure future development along sound and profitable lines.

It is to be expected that much thought will be given to this subject in the next year or two and while the problems of the present and future are under review some earnest consideration might well be given to the suggestion of the application here of some of the Danish agricultural marketing policies and the Danish rural educational system which lies behind their co-operative system.

As pointed out in a recent article by A. Axelsson Dwyer, Secretary to the Central Co-operative Committee of Denmark the co-operative movement occupies a prominent place in the world's general knowledge of Denmark and, as he further pointed out, the enormous growth in the production and marketing section of the movement in that country "is directly connected with the reorganization of farm production in the last quarter of the nineteenth century," when conditions made it necessary for the farmers of Denmark to turn their attention from cereal growing as the main basis of their industry to animal husbandry.

There is plenty of evidence to demonstrate that the agricultural and folk schools played a very important part in enabling the Danish farmers to face and successfully combat the difficulties which threatened to overwhelm their industry and, what is of equal if not greater importance is the fact that these schools have made a tremendous contribution to the cultural welfare and happiness of the rural population of Denmark.

During the past thirty years about one-third of the agricultural youth of Denmark have taken courses at the agricultural schools and the folk high schools, the latter affording opportunities for adult education particularly designed for rural people and including in a wide cultural and practical curriculum some courses in agriculture.

When it is pointed out that there are approximately 60 of these folk high schools and some 22 agricultural schools catering to a rural population of about 1,400,000 it is not difficult to understand the profound influence these institutions have had and are having on the life of the people of the country districts.

Heat Drives New Engine

Only Element Needed Is Claim Of English Inventor

In a garden shed in the little Buckinghamshire village Land End, an engine that "runs on nothing" has been invented.

For 30 years the inventor, Alfred Carr, has been working in a lean-to shed attached to his tiny bungalow in the Chilton Hills, perfecting this machine.

As a young man he watched workmen building an iron fence between brick walls outside a factory. During the following summer, he saw one of the walls collapse before the irresistible pressure of the expanding metal.

The power of the expanding iron impressed him. He pondered over it for many days.

"If one could get several different metals all expanding and contracting to work one against the other a terrific power could be created," he told himself. "Couldn't that be used in some way?"

In the small gloomy shed among his fruit and winter onions, the writer saw the answer to this question.

The machine is no bigger than a typewriter. It consists of a central cylinder, with three pistons, one inside the other, and two flywheels on each side. It is mounted on a pedestal about three feet high, with a little door at the base.

There are no belts inside and there are some rather delicate adjustments of parts there," Carr said. "I've been compelled to work to as little as a ten-thousandth of an inch."

He lighted a blow-lamp and put the flame inside the door, about four minutes later he swung one of the flywheels and the pistons began to move slowly. As the engine gathered speed he took the blow-lamp away.

The tiny engine kept on running with no sound of explosion, no steam or fume, just the rhythmic click of the moving parts.

"Heat circulates at the bottom and cold water at the top," he explained, "between the heat and the cold are metals, expanding and contracting. There you have the principle. The use of it is my secret."

Asked how long the engine would run if well warmed up, Carr replied: "I've had it running for as long as four days. I warmed it up on a Saturday morning and without being heated again it ran until the following Tuesday."

C.B.C. Advances Claim That It Is Adjunct Of Crown

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in an assessment appeal heard in Toronto before Judge James Parker advanced the claim it is exempt from taxation on the ground it is an adjunct of the crown. Judge Parker reserved decision.

Counsel for the city of Toronto said only actual crown lands, not separately incorporated bodies such as the C.B.C., were exempt from taxation. The Canadian National Railways and other publicly-created bodies were taxed in Ontario.

John Jennings, appearing for C.B.C., said the tax exemption claim would be advanced right across Canada.

Evidence Of First Man On North American Continent Found In

Dr. Frank H. Roberts, archaeologist of the Smithsonian Institute, declared he had found evidence the Folsom man, earliest known inhabitant of North America, had roamed from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico.

Reporting on explorations during the past summer, Dr. Roberts said he found stone implements and arrow heads in Saskatchewan which showed work characteristic of that known to have been done by the Folsom man.

The Folsom man, who lived in North America as early as 10,000 years ago, archaeologists claim. Prior to his Saskatchewan explorations, Dr. Roberts traced the Folsom man as far south as Texas and has received specimens dug up all the way from Colorado to the Atlantic seaboard.

Finding of the arrow and spear heads in Saskatchewan was particularly interesting, Dr. Roberts said, because they confirmed the belief the Folsom man, who lived in North America long before the Indians, was a gypsy-like nomad.

Explorations just carried out show the Folsom man lived during the era of the hairy mammoth, the North American camel and an extinct species of bison, the Smithsonian archaeologist reported. The Folsom man's stone implements were always discovered in close association with bones of the mammoth and other animals in the same geological strata.

A Word For The Scot

Writer Pictures Scotland As A Fine Country In Which To Live

Not everybody in Scotland eats porridge, drinks whisky and wears the kilt. Porridge may be eaten, whisky may be drunk, and the kilt may be seen and worn, but there are other things.

Winter is not unduly cold in Scotland. In point of fact, over the greater part of Scotland winter temperatures are higher than they are in London. Except on high ground, snow and frost are rarities of brief duration. Palm trees flourish in the open air. The mean winter temperatures in the Orkney Islands, to the north of the Scottish mainland, is about the same as that of Falmouth, in the south of England.

Scotland is not all mountains. The Highlands are only a part of the country. The Lowlands, too, are beautiful, and they excel in historical and romantic associations.

The Scots are not mean. They refrain from foolish extravagance, but their charities are magnificently endowed and generously maintained. The Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh, where doctors from over all the world are glad to study, is kept up by voluntary contributions.

Larger School Units

Movement Is Being Carried On Vigorously In Alberta

Reported on by the Department of Education at Edmonton indicate that the movement to establish large units for school administration is being carried on vigorously. Blocks of from 30 to 80 small districts are being united to form one large administrative area. So far 34 large units have been formed.

Considerable opposition has developed in many parts of the province to the big unit plan, largely based on claims that school taxes will be increased and that local home rule will be eliminated. Proponents of the new system assert that rural education in its present setup is at a standstill and that further progress is impossible until the small administrative unit disappears.

Two generations ago education was the parents' responsibility. After a long struggle the community assumed the costs of the education of all children within its borders. Today it is being asserted that equal and adequate educational facilities can be provided only by enlarging the administrative areas to include a great number of communities. Calgary Albertan.

Hunter Claims He Bagged Ducks In Unusual Way

Here's the story that is being told—take it or leave it. A well-known young nimrod of Goderich, Ontario, went out hunting ducks and came to a field where there was a good sized flock of them. However, the ducks were settled in an open field with no covering by which the hunter could get close enough for a shot. The wily chap then resorted to strategy and his knowledge of wild life. Knowing the ducks unafraid of cattle, he corralled two calves in the field, some distance away from the birds, and placing an arm about the neck of each, led them close to the ducks. This hidden he was able to get within close range of the game and he arrived back in Goderich with three ducks.

Not Exactly True

All Pioneers Not Hardy Race They Are Pictured

There is a legend that the pioneers were a hale and hardy race, living to a good old age, and successfully raising families of a dozen or more. Apparently that wasn't true, as shown by the deaths commemorated in a booklet covering the period of 20 years from 1863 to 1883. The inscriptions cover 15 pages and 75 deaths. In two cases, the exact age is not mentioned, but the victims were little children. Apparently they were under 10.

Of the 75 deaths listed, 62 died under the age of 30 years, or more than two-thirds of the total. Twelve of the others were over 60 years of age. Only 11 out of the 75 died between the ages of 30 and 60. It appeared that those who lived to the age of 30 had a good chance of reaching a fair age, though only five reached the "allotted span" of 70 years.

Planning Reserve Force

Men To Be Trained By Royal Canadian Mounted Police

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police plans to train a number of reserves from among the staffs of large firms in several cities, it was announced at Ottawa by Deputy Commissioner Thomas Damm.

The reserves will not be trained at Regina or Ottawa where the force already has a large number of trained men available.

One city where the scheme will be tried will be Winnipeg where men chosen from employees of a number of large companies will be drilled. The usual strict R.C.M.P. entrance requirements in regard to physical condition, weight and height will not be rigidly enforced.

The men, when trained, will constitute a reserve supply for any emergency the force may be called upon to face.

Like To Obey

Women In New England Prefer Obedience to the Word 'Obey'

The results of a test show that 59 per cent. of all American women object to the word "obey" in the marriage ceremony. But this is not the case in Italy, Puritan old New England, where the condition is reversed and 55 per cent. of the women want husbands who will boss them around and make them mind. But, if a majority of American women object to obeying their husbands, the position is reversed when the male in the case is their boss. The survey shows 88 per cent. would rather work for a man than a woman. Halifax Chronicle.

Seems Good Record

Dr. P. D. Ross is right when he suggests that $2,500,000,000 in Canadian chartered banks belonging to 4,000,000 depositors is a good record for a nation with something less than 12,000,000 people. It is, moreover, a sign that the financial troubles of a great many people exist only in imagination.

Single women under 25 years old, who wish to work in offices and certain trades in Germany, are with a few exceptions required to work a year first at domestic service.

Britons Condemn Anti-Semitic Violence Carried On In Germany

London. Britons of government ranks and the opposition joined churchmen and newspapers in declaring anti-Semitic violence in Germany threatened European peace.

Amid widespread condemnation of the Nazi campaign came evidence from a cabinet minister it had shaken faith of at least one of Prime Minister Chamberlain's colleagues in his efforts to obtain a lasting friendship with Chancellor Hitler.

Addressing a regional meeting of the National Labour Council on Saturday, Earl de la Warr, president of the board of education, said that instead of encouraging hopes for appeasement, "events on the continent during the last few days have served to add certainty to the conviction that we live in a world in which those who desire to defend the liberties of life must be strong both in arms and in moral purpose."

Arthur Greenwood, Labor, singled out for attack last Sunday by Hitler, said Mr. Chamberlain's peace policy must be a "diagonal failure to long as the international atmosphere is poisoned by clouds of vilification, abuse and misrepresentation; nor will the atmosphere be sweetened by repeated pogroms and persecutions."

Several thousand Communists at a Hyde Park meeting, voted a resolution denouncing "the campaign of terror now being engaged against Jews in Germany." The Communists marched towards the German embassy where a delegation was permitted to present the resolution.

Churchmen, from the archbishop of Canterbury down, deplored treatment of Jews and its effect on Britain's offer of friendship to Germany. The archbishop in a letter to the Times asserted:

"Would that the rulers of the reich could realize that such excesses of hatred and malice put upon the friendship which we are ready to offer them an almost intolerable strain."

More outspoken was the bishop of Durham, Dr. Hensley Henson. He told a diocesan conference "it ought to be made clear to Herr Hitler and his colleagues that if they do sincerely desire the friendship of this country they must cease to insult our faith and cease to persecute our fellow-believers."

The Liberal opposition party issued a manifesto declaring that the "indignation and disgust" provoked by the new wave of anti-Semitic violence in Germany "must surely impair the hope of more cordial relations between Germany and this country."

The wife of a cabinet minister added her voice to the swelling chorus of British denunciation of Germany's violent sweep upon the Jews.

Mrs. Walter Elliot, who quit active participation in Liberal party affairs when she married the Conservative minister of health in 1937, expressed an Olympic reception:

"It is impossible to read of happenings of the last three or four days in central Europe without feeling we must be back again in the middle ages."

The Independent Labor party wrote Herbert von Hiddson, the German ambassador at London, and denounced Germany's treatment of Jews as "a throwback to the jungle" by which "the human family has been disgraced."

Emanuel Shinwell, a Labor member of parliament, speaking at Durham, said the "outrages" backed Germany's rulers "outside the pale of civilization."

It was believed in some quarters that discussion of Germany's colonial claims—the thorny problem which the prime minister has proposed to tackle—would be seriously hindered by the latest example of Germany's treatment of her own "minority" problem.

"I believe that I speak for the Christian people of this country," Most Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang, Archbishop of Canterbury, said in a letter to the Times, "in giving immediate expression to the feelings of indignation with which we have read the deeds of cruelty and destruction which were perpetrated last Thursday in Germany and Austria."

"Whatever provocation may have given by the deplorable act of a single irresponsible Jewish youth, reprisals on such a scale, so fierce, cruel and vindictive, cannot possibly be justified."

For Distressed Areas

Breaking Up Of Ship Will Give Work

For Men In England. London.—One of England's most distressed areas is being put back on its feet, it was revealed with announcement that Sir John Jarvis, Conservative member of parliament for Guildford, had signed a contract with the White Star line to buy the Berengaria.

The former German liner, taken over by Great Britain after the Great War, will be broken up for scrap at Jarvis where 200 men will be engaged on the job for two years. Sir John, prominent in British publishing circles as well as in politics, paid more than £100,000 ($500,000) for her.

Railway Problems Require Best Efforts Of Those Responsible

Toronto. Canadians are too prone to dwell on the cost of railway transportation to the taxpayer and to forget the cost of competing forms of transportation on highways and waterways, Hon. C. D. Howe, minister of transport, said here.

Addressing the 21st triennial conference of the Railroad Y.M.C.A. of North America, the minister expressed the opinion both Canadian railway systems, the Canadian National and the Canadian Pacific, were efficiently operated.

"Railway service is and probably always will be necessary to our national economy," he said. "Railways have a fundamental advantage in that they can move a ton of freight more cheaply than any other form of transportation excepting the water carrier."

"Improvements in railway equipment and operation have made considerable strides in speeding the delivery of freight and adding to the comfort of passengers."

"The problem is one that requires the best efforts of those responsible for railway management but, with the return of business to normal, and the growth of population to be expected in a country like Canada, I have every hope that our railways have passed over their worst difficulties and can move on to more prosperous days."

Debt charges on the Canadian National were out of proportion to those of competing railways, said the minister, due to assumption by the government of debts incurred under private ownership.

The ratio of fixed charges to gross operating revenues for all Canadian railways in the United States in 1937 was 15.9 per cent, and for the Canadian Pacific it was 16.6 per cent. But for the Canadian National it was 26.9 per cent.

Since the Canadian National system was formed by merging several former systems it had never failed to earn its operating expenses but in only one year had it been able to meet its fixed charges of $50,000,000. The present Canadian National administration body, a small board of directors chosen without regard to political or sectional considerations, was in his opinion the most efficient form of management which could be devised.

"It seems to me that we in Canada are too willing to dwell on the cost to the taxpayer of railway transportation and too anxious to forget the cost to the taxpayer of competing forms of transportation," said the minister.

"The bureau of statistics has published figures indicating that for eight years, 1929-1936 inclusive, Canada spent in an average year on its highways for construction $48,000,000, for maintenance $21,500,000 and for interest on highway bonds $20,300,000, or a total average expenditure of $90,000,000. In the same period gasoline taxes brought in $26,000,000 and motor license fees about $12,000,000, leaving an annual excess of expenditure over income from highways of $52,000,000."

"The annual call on the taxpayer for railway purposes should not exceed that amount."

To Visit Provinces

King And Queen To Visit All Parts Of Dominion

Ottawa.—When the king and queen come to Canada early next summer they will plan to visit every province in the Dominion, Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced. Their Majesties intend at present to devote three full weeks to the Canadian visit and their trip to the United States will be in addition to that period.

Arrangements for the Canadian itinerary, responsibility for which rests upon the Canadian government, will be in hands of a sub-committee of senior members of the cabinet not yet named. It is anticipated they will have all plans completed before the end of the year.

Keynotes of the itinerary will be the endeavor to have their Majesties see as many Canadians as possible and be seen by as many Canadians as the time permits. Social functions will be reduced to the minimum for that purpose.

Highlight of the tour will be the function in Ottawa where their Majesties will unveil the national war memorial recently put in position.

All arrangements will have to be submitted to the king and queen for their approval. The cabinet sub-committee will confer with designated provincial government officials so arrangements may be co-ordinated. The government has not yet been advised the exact time the king and queen will reach Canada.

For Betterment Of Canada

No Simple Remedy For The Economic ills Of Dominion

Galt, Ont. There is no simple panacea or cure-all for the economic ills afflicting Canada, Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, National Conservative leader, said at a meeting in support of Karl Homuth, Conservative candidate in the Waterloo South federal by-election.

"There is nothing to blaze a way for us into heaven overnight, but there are methods that over a reasonable period of time will bring about the betterment for all classes that I advocate," Dr. Manion said. "The object of government is the happiness of the governed and that is the aim I shall attempt to bring about."

"If I get into power in Canada, I'll make the balance of my life an effort to bring about those just conditions. My ideas are within the four corners of good Conservatism. I'll say good Liberalism—but generally they are good Canadianism. I am subservient to no individual, group, clique or class."

Mexico Wants Planes

Government Is Investigating Production By Firms In Canada

Montreal.—Officials of Canadian Car and Foundry Company disclosed the Mexican government had "expressed an interest" in the firm's aeroplane-producing capabilities and that representatives were on their way here to "talk things over."

The Mexican representatives, an official said, were leaving for Montreal from Fort William, where he had inspected a company plant opened a year ago for production of armaments and aircraft.

Labor Wins By Election

Observers Regard Vote As Set-Back For Chamberlain

Dartford, England.—Labor wrested the Dartford House of Commons seat from the government in what political observers regarded as a setback for Prime Minister Chamberlain in his foreign policy.

Mrs. Jennie L. Adamson, a member of the Labor party's national executive was victorious by 46,514 votes to 42,276 for Geoffrey Mitchell, Conservative and head of a London contracting firm.

The total vote was far heavier than in the 1935 general election when the late F. Clarke, Conservative, defeated Mrs. Adamson by 35,242 votes to 30,560.

"I won because the voters disapproved of the government's foreign policy and are ashamed of Mr. Chamberlain's betrayal of Czechoslovakia and democracy," Mrs. Adamson said.

The by-election was the second since the Munich agreement resulted in the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia with portions going to Germany, Poland and Hungary.

In the first Quintin Hoggs, Conservative, retained Oxford for the government ranks. There are five more by-elections pending.

Bren Gun Hearing

Nov. 21 Is Date Set For Argument

Ottawa. Mr. Justice H. H. Davis of the supreme court of Canada heard the last evidence as royal commissioner investigating the Bren gun contract and set Monday, Nov. 21, as the date for argument by counsel as the date for argument in eight weeks of public hearings. The argument is expected to last a week.

The close of the hearing came as a result of conferences between the judge and counsel. At these meetings counsel agreed upon the order for argument, the order in which they will speak and a time limit for each speaker.

Peace And Freedom Come Only Through Continuous Effort

Ottawa.—"Peace and freedom cannot be secured through inaction," Prime Minister Mackenzie King declared in an Armistice Day message carried over the national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

"We must do what we can to see that peace and freedom can be achieved only through continuous and constructive effort."

"Reason, patience and goodwill must be made to prevail in the council of nations. They are positive, not passive, forces. In this very year we have witnessed the power of all three. It remains for us to ensure their triumph throughout the years to come."

Following is the text of the prime minister's message:

Twenty years ago to-day, there came upon a war-weary world a great silence—the silence of peace. Years of death and desolation lay wrapped in the folds of a past never to be forgotten. Men's minds were suddenly filled with the vision of a new era.

As the years passed, these high hopes faded, and a few short weeks ago, the world again passed in silence the silence of impending calamity. On the very brink of the abyss, the nations were drawn back. A sense of profound relief and thanksgiving filled the world.

Both occasions came vividly to mind in our moments of silence to-day. Each marked an armistice, each was but a stage on the long and steep road leading to enduring peace.

It is well we have our moments of silence, our days of remembrance. Compared with the ages which have preceded it, our own is one of haste and confusion. The sure ways, the right paths, are scarcely seen. What has been called "the celestial and immortal voice of conscience" is too often lost amid the distraction of modern voices or the crowded thoroughfares of life.

Remembrance Day brings also to our minds the sorrows, the sufferings, and the sacrifices of the years of war.

Men and women everywhere have asked themselves, in recent weeks, one searching question: Was this sacrifice in vain? For myself, I refuse to believe it. The memory of the suffering and sacrifice was in the minds of people all over the world in the dark days of last September.

The recollection of this sacrifice counted for much in the minds of those men who, on the last day of that fateful month, spared mankind the hideous repetition of another world war.

If, in the silence of this Remembrance Day, we would listen to the voices of our dead, they surely would speak to us of the peace and freedom for which they fought and died.

In our national memorial, both the struggle and the cause stand symbolized.

Housing Loans

Large Sum Is Approved Under National Housing Act

Ottawa.—Lending $24,685,268 have been approved under the National Housing Act and its predecessor, the Dominion Housing Act up to October 31 last, a statement issued by the finance department announced. Up to the same date loans for home improvement, aggregated $22,319,546, making a grand total for house building and house repair of more than $47,000,000.

Housing loans up to the end of last month provided housing accommodation for 3,272 Canadian families and the home improvement loans enabled 55,820 families to improve their existing dwellings. The statement estimated those loans had made possible an expenditure on actual building construction (including land) of more than $33,000,000.

Cold Winter For Northland

Caribou Trek South Is Sure Sign According To Trappers

The Pas, Man.—Heavy caribou migration during a recent week-end suggested to veteran trappers of heavy snow and severe cold for the northland this winter.

Thick-necked timber caribou are crossing the Hudson Bay Railway a few miles north of here, and the quality, long-haired barren lands caribou are migrating toward the timber-line 80 miles south of Churchill, Manitoba's Hudson Bay port.

Jack Bacon, veteran trapper, said only heavy or packed snow on the barren lands would force the long-haired animals southward so early in search of food. Usually they do not migrate until December, he said.

Both groups of caribou, though hundreds of miles apart, apparently start the southern trek simultaneously.

Prediction Europe Now Settling Down To More Quiet Times

London.—Prime Minister Chamberlain declared the British government must be a "go-getter for peace," but made it clear Great Britain must be so strong she should be treated everywhere with respect.

Speaking at the annual Guildhall banquet given by the incoming lord mayor of London, Sir Frank Bowler, the prime minister predicted Europe "is settling down to quieter times," and asserted he saw no reason why Britons should not face Christmas "in a spirit of cheerfulness and confidence."

He pledged British armaments would be "commensurate with the part we want to play in maintaining peace."

"I wish this country to be a go-getter for peace," he said. "That does not mean we want to undertake the role of policeman-in-ordinary to the world. If we see peace threatened we shall use any influence we may possess to save it. If war breaks out we shall take any opportunity to stop it."

The prime minister stressed his determination to build on the Munich accord for "peace, security and justice for all under the rule of law, order, reason and good faith."

He replied to Chancellor Hitler's expressed fears a "different kind of government" might succeed Mr. Chamberlain's and be headed by "war-mongers."

"There is no reason to suppose," Mr. Chamberlain said, "that any of us have reached a final and unalterable stage of government."

The Munich agreement demonstrated, the prime minister declared, that four great powers under different systems of government were able to agree without quarrelling "upon the main outlines of settlement of one of the most thorny and dangerous international problems of our time."

"That should encourage us to think it might be possible for such powers to agree on other things as well," he continued. "Peace was not saved by words, not even by notes; it was saved by action."

"And I have no shadow of doubt in my mind that what we did was right."

The prime minister summed up the government's foreign policy under four points—the same four he enunciated when he first took office in 1937.

First was to maintain peace. Second was to make Britain so strong she would be treated all over the world with respect. Third was to promote prosperity of industry and thus provide employment for the people. Fourth was to work steadily for improvement of conditions of British people.

He reiterated "the piling up of armaments is utterly distasteful to me," but added:

"For the time being, I regard it as inevitable, but I hope it is only a temporary accompaniment to that other part of the policy to which I am turning all my energies without qualification and without malingering—a policy of understanding and good will, a policy which is desired by all the peoples, a policy to which I invite the co-operation of all nations."

Contending the Anglo-German "no more war" declaration had received insufficient attention, the prime minister read it to the gathering.

He added it was a "famous proposition" to say the document indicated any loosening of Britain's ties with France, and declared he and Lord Halifax, foreign secretary, were looking forward with pleasure to their forthcoming visit to Paris.

Current Comment on Local Events

ON PAY DAY the post-office is the busiest spot in town. Not only is there extra work to be done in writing and cashing money orders, but the number of C.O.D. parcels from mail order houses is sufficient to stock a small store. Two weeks business is crowded in two days, pay-day and the day following. Stores are working at high pressure, delivery trucks are rushing here, there and everywhere, and a stranger coming in on pay-day would open his eyes in astonishment at the volume of business being carried on. But if he came a couple of days later, he would wonder if it was the same town. If people would spread their business over two weeks instead of trying to crowd it into two days, it would result in better service and steadier nerves.

THERE HAS been considerable comment on Coleman's water supply since a verbal report was made to the council by provincial health officials. In order to enlighten the ratepayers on the reports so far submitted, The Journal will endeavor to secure the facts from the council. Reports are not reassuring; that this matter can be treated lightly. If there is danger of contamination of the source of the water supply, it is imperative that precautionary steps be taken without delay, for the health of the community cannot be ignored. It is alleged that the health department officials brought the danger to the attention of the council, and they were over-ruled by officials of another department. If there is undue influence being exerted by any government department, officials to soft-pedal on this vital matter, then the quicker we know all about it the better for all concerned. Political interference cannot be tolerated in such matters as this. There is too much at stake in the lives and health of the people of Coleman.

COLEMAN ELKS are doing a worth-while community service in sponsoring the Boy Scouts in Coleman. There are so many boys to whom the training and ideals of the Scout movement will prove valuable in after life, that they will have kind memories of the Elks in getting behind them. Parents should give every encouragement to children to take advantage of Boy Scout training.

EVER since the province was formed, tradesmen worked without having to pay licenses. The Social Credit government imposed a license on barbers, plumbers, printers, retailers, in fact on everyone from whom it could get $5.00. The tax is unwarranted, particularly in view of the fact that so much money has been taken from the taxpayers to pay for Credit Houses, Social Credit experts, increased indemnities for members, the creation of additional jobs for political heelers and other unwarranted expenses. Another unwarranted tax is the $5.00 charged against the installation of plumbing fixtures in a home. With so much money expended on foolish legislation, and in other useless ways, democratic people have the right to protest against unnecessary taxes.

ATTEMPTED freak legislation to control the Press has already cost the publishers of this province considerable money in legal costs, to prevent the Aberhart government imposing a rule of dictatorship on the people of Alberta, despite Mr. Aberhart's foxy words to the contrary.

"A Blessed Event"

When a baby arrives in a home, its news of real interest to the women in the neighborhood, for after all it is an important and blessed event, to an extent that the masculine heart does not appreciate as much as the feminine. The arrival of a baby is the cause of much speculation, and its appearance, the color of its hair, (if it has any) and its eyes, and other external features are carefully gone over by the ladies. So when a new baby arrived in the neighborhood of the writer's home this week, there was the usual flutter along the street, and remarks such as: "Isn't that lovely, so-and-so has a new baby son, and the first one was a daughter; won't they be glad,—first a girl and then a boy," and so on far into the day, when two or three are gathered together.

Well, the cause of these rumormongers is the arrival of a son at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Korman, and being near neighbors, it caused a little more than the ordinary interest attending such arrivals. This it is hoped will duly herald the arrival of this young gentleman into this fast-moving world, and give him a good start in life, at least as far as giving him some publicity goes. So here's good luck to the baby.

So-called swing music is about the craziest thing—worse than the crude attempts at producing music by the Kaffirs, who used to sit around their wagons at night and get an imaginary "jag" on native beer; then go into their dance. Makes one sometimes ponder if civilized man has progressed very far from his primitive instincts.—Ex.

Catholic Ladies Aid Bazaar

The annual prize drawing and tea of the Ladies Aid of Holy Ghost church held last Saturday in the Italian hall was well attended by people from town, though the receipts were not quite up to the amount last year, stated Mrs. S. In former years a dance has been held in the evening, at which quite a number of tickets were sold for the prize drawing, but this year the dance was not held.

However, the ladies appreciate the support accorded them in their efforts, and extend thanks to all who assisted.

No Housing Loans in Alberta

National Housing Act loans by the Dominion government to the provinces of Canada, enabling individuals to modernize, extend or repair their existing dwellings, totalling up to October 31, 1938, $24,695,268, but not one loan was made in Alberta, owing to the credit of the province having been practically destroyed by freak legislation. 6,272 people benefitted under the Dominion Housing Act, but Albertans are strictly out of the picture. Under the Dominion's legislation there are now no less than 251 communities throughout the country in which loans have been made and this number is being steadily increased as the approved lending institutions build up their organizations to co-operate more effectively with the Dominion.

Rebate

An Aberdonian was getting married. After the ceremony was over the best man inquired: "I suppose you gave the minister a fee?" "Oh, yes," said the cautious benedict. "I gave him sixpence." "And what did the minister say?" asked the surprised best man. "Nothing at all. He just looked at the bride and gave me threepence back."—Montreal Star.

Canadians Show Class at Calgary

Canadians showed class at practices at Calgary's artificial ice arena over the week-end. While they still need two of three weeks strenuous training to toughen them for the long winter's grind, they showed improvement over their first practice at Lethbridge. It is estimated they received seven hours practice during their stay at Calgary.

Coach Kryschuk split the boys into two teams and watched with critical eye. Quick to see mistakes he stops play immediately and corrects the erring plays. To-day quiet confidence prevails among the players, which is the more convincing since the team watched Calgary, Drumheller and Turner Valley go through their training grinds. Asked what he thought of the above teams, coach Kryschuk remarked with a quiet smile, that all teams are tough until the final whistle blows with you on the long end of the score.

According to Calgary students of the game, Canadians were the smartest team to take the ice this season, and that includes the mighty Stampede. Said one Calgary gentleman, who has long been connected with Calgary hockey and who has a son playing for the Trail Smokers, "I have seen Calgary, Drumheller, Olds and Turner Valley practice here and Coleman has them all beaten."

Exhibition hockey games during the past week have left the dopesters high and dry. Calgary, the invincible, to hear some radio commentators, were given an artistic trimming from Trail Smoke Eaters, and made to look bad, very bad, in comparison. Calgary is now groping around to find what it is all about, especially when they figured they had imported the cream of western Canada's hockey players to play for them.

Lethbridge, on the other hand, consider themselves the uncrowned Alberta champions. The Leafs after taking a defeat Friday evening from Trail 4-3, came back Saturday evening to paste a 6-2 defeat on the Allan Cuppers, which is no mean feat. Edmonton Eskimos have been given a rough ride in their exhibition games with Saskatoon Quakers. They won the first at home 2-1, but have been defeated two straight at Saskatoon, 3-1 and 4-1. Edmonton are relying mostly on home players although they imported a few.

C.P.R. to the Rescue

The first snowstorm of the season showed unmistakably how much the western provinces depend on the railroads. Here's an instance: Last Friday, standing at the C.P.R. wicket an hour before train time, the first contingent purchasing tickets included a number of people brought from the west on a bus. It could not proceed further east and the bus company necessarily had to purchase railroad tickets to carry the passengers further east. The hockey club, which had arranged to travel by bus to Calgary to practice on artificial ice, also had to fall back on the railroad.

Presently the train came in, with two powerful engines pulling five passenger coaches and a few baggage cars. Unlike the conveyances using the highways, the railroad does not wait for government snow plows to clear the tracks. That expense is borne by the railroad, which can usually be relied on to get passengers to their destinations under their own power. Were it not for the railroad, none of those wishing to travel last Friday eastward from Coleman could have found any other way to travel except by plodding through snowdrifts or falling back on horses and sleighs. And that is out of the question when long distances have to be travelled.

Jack caught the meaning. His lips became colorless.

"See here," he argued. "I'm not trying to stop you from working the way you see fit. Why shouldn't the rule work both ways? I'm paying the bills on this experiment of mine. No matter whose idea is right, we'll share and share alike."

"Um - humph," McKenzie Joe rolled off his tongue and stared far into the valley. "I knew another fellow like you once, Jack. He got an idea that he had to go after things on a grand scale. First thing he knew all his money was gone. And he had to sell out."

"That's idiotic," said Joe bluntly. "Hammond's eyes snapped.

"You're only saying that because you've got a prejudice against anything that's modern or sensible. All you want to do is waste everybody's time, staggering around blindfolded."

Heedless he swung down the step then and headed toward the village. McKenzie Joe stared after him, a net undrinking light in his troubled eyes.

"Now I know I'm goin' over to Whoopee and get drunk," he mused at last.

For that matter, Hammond knew it too, and the knowledge helped considerably to cool his anger as he pounded along the trail toward his place's claims. Getting drunk, with McKenzie Joe, was like a plague of locusts or a spring flood. Something disastrous always happened. At last, Jack turned from the trail and went into Jeanne's store for a tin of tobacco.

"You look worried," she said.

"I am. Joe has announced that he's going to get drunk Thursday night."

"Well," she laughed, "he'll have plenty of company." Jeanne was much more buoyant these days. Lew Snade had not come again to Suphrie. In fact, Kenning had told Jack that the man had purchased one of several newly imported canoes and gone down the lake, prospecting. Enough that he had departed, Jeanne went on. "You won't have to call out the reserves when Joe gets going!" Jack remained serious.

"It's really pretty terrible, Jeanne. Cracked heads and all that."

"But you're going to be with him—see that he doesn't get hurt."

"I can't leave him—something always happens when I do."

Jeanne smiled.

"Maybe he'll fool you this time and be good."

"Here's hoping," Jack felt better now. Strangely, he always felt better after he had talked to Jeanne. Towers. Yet he did not realize how often he needlessly dropped by this little store to buy tobacco when he had plenty, matches when his pockets were full, socks he did not intend to use. A week before, she had insisted on paying the partners for the original supplies which they had furnished her, only to go deeper in debt. It had been a secret loan from Jack Hammond for $5,000. To be ruined out by airplane the next day, and sent by express to The Pas. At least, the monetary weight of her past was off her conscience. Now she came forward, wistfully eager.

"Gee, it's good to see you smile again," she said. Then hesitantly, "You've helped me so much. I'd give anything if I could."

There she halted and turned away. Jack's eyes followed her gaze, to sight the trim form of the approaching Kay Joyce.

"Oh, there you are," the Seattle girl exclaimed, with her usual easy command of spontaneity. "I've been looking for you."

Jack Hammond felt again the queer emotions which flooded him whenever these three met. As though he should explain Jeanne, extol her good qualities. It made him angry with himself; Jeanne needed no extolling and Kay had never made an outright move of enmity.

"I was just on the way down to the creek," Jack said. "I heard some shooting."

"Yes, Olson's mad—another strike," "Olson again?" Hammond turned to Jeanne. "Better put it in a new order." Then to Kay: "Olson practically buys out the store after every strike." Kay covered her rejoinder with a disarming smile.

"I must learn how to handle these rich miners. You'll teach me some time, Miss Towers?"

Jack Hammond gasped. For Jeanne replied, with the same smiling pleasantness.

"Yes, we must exchange recipes—" "Oh, gorgeous," Kay Joyce was equally unctuous. Then, "Jack, can you walk down to the creek with me?"

"You've simply got to help me out with this man Olson."

"With Olson? I thought he was after your mother."

"She's after him, you mean. It's sickening. Now he's been hung in the air."

He wants to give a big dinner to celebrate this strike."

"Well?"

"I simply can't sit through a party like that. You've got to get me out of it—tell him that we're going for an airplane ride. It's to be Fourth of July night."

"What time?"

"Seven o'clock."

"Thanks for that! I was afraid it would be later. I've got to be away by ten. I've promised to be with McKenzie Joe. It's something I can't break. I simply can't. You'll let me go by ten?"

It was with a bit of pique that she said good-bye to him the night of Olson's party. Hammond almost ran from the cottage to his cabin. Joe already was dressing, a funeral procedure.

He pawed at the buttoning of his collar, stretching his neck dolefully as he strove to accustom it to its confines. He peered into the crinkly mirror and tied his blue tie with its red polka dots for a third and a fourth time. He took his old hat to the door and brushed it meticulously; he had forgotten to order a new one. He rubbed another dose of bear grease on his boots. He put on his electric blue coat, and gave a hitch to his electric blue trousers with their unpressed bow wrinkles at the knees. Then he walked dolefully to the door.

"Ready?" he asked Jack.

There was quite a crowd in front of the dance hall when they arrived in Whoopee. At intervals a bomb hurled from a mortar into the air and exploded with a detonation which threw itself from mountain peak to mountain peak in seemingly ceaseless echoes.

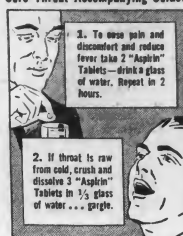

Around the World Annie, resplendent in a dress of star-spangled bunting, topped by a blue-and-white tricorn, trimmed with a red cockade, was vociferously greeting all comers. "Liberty enlightening 'er worl!" she shouted. "Ray for Whoopee!"

"Whoopie, yourself!" shouted a miner.

"Took the words out of my mouth," answered Annie, with a merry little grin. "Whoopie for you."

After a time they went inside. An orchestra began to play, violin, accordions, trombone, cornet and accordion, imported by air from Juneau. As if from nowhere, girls appeared, slinking slyly toward the incoming miners. One of them, Florine, came out extended, as if for dancing, placed herself directly in the path of McKenzie Joe.

He did not evade her. He did not brush her aside. He merely put out a hand and with a mournful, shivering motion, moved her out of his way. Straight onward he went to the bar, and while Jack strove vainly to restrain him, ordered Scotch. Then, disdaining the whisky glass, he raised the bottle a croak, in Canadian parlance in the eye of it.

For a long moment he eyed it. His bewilderment, eyes circled under heavy brows. Then he raised the big bottle to his lips and allowed it to gurgle until Jack gasped, from the mere agony of watching.

CHAPTER VIII.

An hour later, Jack Hammond searched the crowded dance hall in vain. All in a moment, he had lost McKenzie Joe, and this was a bad time to lose him.

Evidences of McKenzie's activities, however, were glaringly present. A window stood gaping at the grayling dusk; darkness did not come now until after midnight. A bottle had broken the pane and Joe had thrown it, as a grand finale for the fireworks exhibit. There also were broken chairs, crushed to bits by McKenzie's tremendously strong hands, to the cheers of the mob. Joe had not joined in the enthusiasm—evidence that of Around the World Annie, who was charging 100 per cent. profit on all breakages. True, he had lost some of his funeral air and his lips bore a hint of a smile, like a polar bear.

That is, the smile had been there when Jack last had seen him, with his hat on sideways, his electric blue suit badly disheveled, and his course in life a vague, wandering one, in which he sometimes walked fast into a wall without realizing it—until he bumped his nose. Then, solemnly, he would turn, blankly survey his surroundings, and begin another aimless excursion.

It had been during one of these sorties that Jack had lost his partner. One moment Joe had been steering straight for the middle of the dance floor, only suddenly to disappear as a surging mass of leg-flailing miners and their girls cut him off from the pursuing Hammond.

For instant ease from chest colds, ordinary sore throats.

RUB ON MINARD'S GREAT CANADIAN RUBBING LINIMENT

MINARD'S LINIMENT

By the time Jack had fought his way through the tangled mass, McKenzie Joe was gone. Now the younger partner sought him in vain, at last going to the gambling hall.

Here the crowd was even thicker. Throngs were jammed around the sides of the crap games; the clatter of the dice was continuous with the drone of the keeper.

Spaced at intervals were the intricate affairs of faro, each game with its dealer, laconically fingering the cards from their wooden box, his frozen faced look, high on his long-legged stool, his green eye shade and his dead cigar each drooping at a similar angle, its never restful case-keeper, with his counting board recording the cards as they came forth.

Here too was the glitter of the "big wheels," glaring with a maze of electric lamps, charged by the pride of Around the World Annie's establishment—a gasoline motor light plant, which had formed an entire load for Timmy Moon's plane. The stud games also were busy, slot machines, the blackjack games and the enthralling click of the ivory ball as it roused the roulette wheel. Hammond turned in that direction. He had sighted Bruce Kenning.

He was careless, his collar loosened. Slightly drunk, he stood sweating at the board, his left hand incessantly riffling the pile of chips before him, his right at-tempting outwardly to place his bet, a four-way wager here, a straight bet there, a hedge on the Double O. A look of surprise came into Hammond's eyes as he neared the man; there was terrific concentration about him, an air of obliviousness to everything save the lay-down board and the dizzy spin of the multi-colored wheel.

Organization Prosperous

Alberta Wheat Pool Was Founded Fifteen Years Ago

In the autumn of life, Henry Wise was the stalwart Lincoln-like figure who for three decades championed the cause of the Alberta farmer, had a fond memory on October 29, the memory of an agrarian association founded as the first of its kind in Canada.

It is the Alberta Wheat Pool which on that date was 15 years old—a memorable date in the mind of Alberta's grand old man of agriculture.

Henry Wise was its first president, a post he held for years. A co-operative marketing agency for thousands of Alberta farmers, the Wheat Pool started operations Oct. 29, 1923.

No longer a compulsory organization as in the days of its infancy when 25,000 farmer-members by virtue of contract were signed to market all their grain with the pool, the co-operative to-day operates 430 country elevators and large terminal houses at the port of Vancouver.

Any farmer can market with the pool now and this year from Alberta's great wheat crop of 140,000,000 bushels, millions of bushels have rolled into pool elevators for transportation to the Pacific Coast.

From his farm home at Carstairs, Mr. Wood who is 77 years old, watches in retirement the activities of the marketing agency. On his retirement from the board chairman last year, he has been honored as president and an annual life honorarium created for him.

To-day Lew Hutchinson, a member of the first executive in 1923, is the head man at the pool headquarters in Calgary. He is chairman of the board and with him is R. D. Furly, first general manager who came from Edmonton 15 years ago to open the headquarters office there.

Formation of the pool followed a widespread campaign for a farmer-controlled wheat marketing agency by Aaron Sapiro. A fiery, little Jewish lawyer, an authority on co-operative marketing, Sapiro was brought from California to preach self-marketing to western agrarians.

A year after the establishment of the Alberta Pool, similar pools were formed in Saskatchewan and Manitoba and a central selling agency—The Canadian Wheat Pool—organized.

In the first year of operation the Alberta Pool had a membership of 25,719 with a total of 2,536,300 acres under contract. The compulsory contract was discontinued several years ago.

Canada May Admit Few Medical Specialists From Europe

Of the scores of professional men in central Europe seeking to enter Canada a few specialists in the medical profession and some particularly qualified chemists will likely be admitted, it was learned at Ottawa. Immigration officials take the view that a surplus of physicians is already and therefore they are generally recommending against admitting medical men from Germany, Austria, Italy, Poland and other countries of central Europe.

Most of the applications are from Jewish doctors and include those from territories now in the Reich and adjacent countries where their positions are felt to be insecure.

One factor that makes the problem difficult is the claim coming from certain districts in the prairies that they have not adequate medical services. From several of these districts have come pleas that central European doctors be admitted to go to such localities.

Immigration figures show immigration to Canada from the central European countries increased in the six months ended September 30, compared with the same period in 1937.

Provincial Election Next Year Is Rumored at Edmonton-Legislature Now in Session

Edmonton, Nov. 15.—With the opening this week of another session of the legislature—the seventh session since the 1935 election—the Alberta electorate stood some chance of getting some information on what is actually happening in the government and among private members.

The first caucus of the session, held on Monday, was watched closely by observers for an indication of whether the private members who are known to be impatient, and even disgusted with Premier Aberhart and certain of his ministers, are going to rise in open rebellion, or whether they are going to wait until a better opportunity arises when the general election draws closer.

There is good reason for believing that the provincial government is expected to announce an election shortly after Their Majesties the King and Queen visit this province next May or June. Although Aberhart has been cultivating Camrose riding for months past, and might be expected to make himself candidate there if he were to run for reelection at all (since he knows that he would not stand a chance of election in his present constituency of Okotoks-High River) there are more signs that he will not run at all.

But most of his ministers and most of the private members in the house, having sampled comparative glory and very substantial incomes as legislators, want to be re-elected. It is known that many, if not all of them, fear oblivion if Aberhart undertakes to lead them again as Social Crediters, but at the same time they fear an open break. Hence the close interest in the relationships beneath the surface during the present session.

The fact that the Social Credit candidate won the Athabasca by-election gave them but little encouragement, privately. The fact that the margin of victory was very close, that even that slim margin was obtained only by such concentration of government forces as would not be possible in a general election, and that Athabasca was the best field in the province for Social Credit propaganda at the time, all detracted from any undue optimism. Also important was the fact that it was merely a by-election, giving the electors the choice between being friendly with the present government in the hope of concessions, or of electing a member to the opposite without hope of patronage. When the opportunity comes, with a general election to get a new government in Edmonton, there may be a different story in the ballots even in Athabasca.

Expected to consume much time in the new session of the house is the Oil and Gas Conservation Act; the government wants to fix up some clauses in the hope of killing all efforts to have the present act thrown out.

That job was ostensibly the reason for calling the session, but also listed on the agenda for the session, importantly although inconspicuously, is a bill to provide the members of the house with some Christmas shopping money. The regular indemnity of $2,000 for each regular session is not sufficient for the members of the house; not in any session since they held their first in 1936 have they failed to pass an act providing themselves with extra money either in advance or as an outright extra payment.

Other bills on the agenda include minor amendments to the Hail Insurance Act, to the Debt Adjustment Act, and also to the School Act to ensure that authority heretofore vested in district trustees can be taken over by the boards in charge of the enlarged divisions.

An act to validate the spending of $200,000 for the establishment of the "treasury branches" which have been set up by the government also must be passed; the money was provided first by order-in-council without any legislative authority, and now the government must ask the legislature for the right to do what already has been done.

So far, nine of the "treasury branches" have been established, but there has been no rush of business in them as far as can be disclosed here, and indications are that the whole idea of the government going into the banking business has proved already a highly unprofitable failure.

As the Trochu Tribune remarked a few weeks ago, there has been no mention of Premier Aberhart transferring any bank account from a bank to the treasury house, any more than there has been any word of any of the other ministers switching their personal bank accounts. "Take a tip from your premier and the Tribune," the Trochu paper remarked icily, "the enjoyment of observers here, 'if you are lucky enough to have any money in a chartered bank, leave it there until Mr. Aberhart and his cabinet ministers take their money out, and then—still leave it there.'"

The failure of the premier and his ministers to accept any of the so-called "prosperity certificates" of two years ago, although urging everyone else in the province to accept them, came to mind again.

MR. BUSINESS MAN:

Remember this! When we call on you for printing orders, we are trying to secure work for local printers. When a salesman from an outside place calls, he is interested only in the commission he will get on the order. If he takes orders for printing to be done in some other place, then Coleman is that much poorer, for the chances are that the money you pay for work done by Coleman printers will come back to you several times over. We all lose when you give work to outsiders which could be done here, regardless of the few cents difference in cost.
